

Feminism and Women's Empowerment in Kavery Nambisan's Novels

K.Kavitha,
Assistant professor, department of English
Navarasam Arts and Science College for Women, Arachalur
Erode District-638 101
Email Id:kkceleskavi@gmail.com

High Educational and intellectual standacts have sharpened the mined of writer and they contribute a psychological approach towards their work. Kavery Nambisan's novel gives suggestion for the empowerment of woman. Every individual woman has to face the problems and overcome the barriers to get empowered is implied in her fiction. This is brought out clearly in her novel "The Hills of Angheri. Nambisan presents her protagonist Nanji in the fiction "The Scent of Pepper" as a victim of a society dominated by patriarch. Nanji is a silent woman who bears everything silently and she comes out successfully in her life. She undergoes lots of problems but she possess the beautiful qualities to come out colourfully.

Woman characters in "On Wings of Butterflies" and "Mango Coloured Fish" fight against the injustice done to them and they were able to achieve success. Nambisan through her novels presents the correct way of opposing and how human relationship can be strengthened. Nambisan in her novel "A Town Like Ours" presents the condition of society and how women after lot of struggles establish their place in society. It's not easy for the human beings to lead their life in this world as a human. It needs lot of rules and regulations for successful completion. These qualities can be learnt from Nambisan's novels. Woman characters accept the life which is full of hardships and difficulties. They derive profit from hardships. Nambisan has explained the empowerment of woman in a different way. She has stressed the importance of freedom for woman and that freedom should not spoil man woman relationship.